MAINTENANCE

To ensure the longevity and cleanliness of your Ruqiji heating pad:

- Always unplug the heating pad from the power outlet before cleaning.
- Detach the controller from the heating pad.
- The microfiber heating pad is machine washable. Follow the care instructions on the product label for specific washing guidelines.
- Allow the heating pad to fully air dry before reattaching the controller and using it again.

TROUBLESHOOTING

Problem	Possible Cause	Solution
Heating pad does not heat, controller displays '0' or no display.	Loose connection. Pad is folded or tucked. Internal malfunction.	Ensure the power cord is securely plugged into the outlet and the controller is firmly connected to the pad. Unfold the pad completely and ensure it lies flat during use. If the issue persists after checking connections and unfolding, the unit may have an internal fault.
Pad not heating sufficiently.	Temperature setting too low.	Increase the temperature setting using the '+' button on the controller.
Pad automatically turns off unexpectedly.	Timer has expired.	This is normal operation. If you require longer use, reset the timer or select a longer duration.

If you encounter problems not listed here or if the suggested solutions do not resolve the issue, please contact Ruqiji customer support for assistance.
