- Rust Prevention: The fire pit is coated with high-temperature powder for rust resistance. However, prolonged exposure to moisture can still cause rust.
- Storage: When not in use, especially during inclement weather or off-season, cover the fire pit with the provided waterproof cover. Store in a dry area if possible.
- Inspection: Periodically inspect all bolts and connections to ensure they are tight. Check for any signs of damage or wear.

TROUBLESHOOTING

Difficulty during assembly:

Ensure all screws are only hand-tightened initially. Fully tighten all fasteners only after all components are correctly aligned and in place. Refer to the "Assembly Instructions" section for detailed steps. If parts are missing or damaged, contact customer support.

Fire not burning strongly:

Ensure you are using dry, seasoned wood. Wet or green wood will produce more smoke and less heat. Check that the airflow vents are not obstructed. The geometric cut-out design is intended to promote airflow.

Rust appearing on surfaces:

While the fire pit has a rust-resistant coating, prolonged exposure to moisture can lead to rust. Ensure the fire pit is covered with the waterproof cover when not in use and stored in a dry location during extended periods of inactivity.
