Unbranded: An Informational Guide to the Documentary Film

Released: 2015 | Rating: PG-13

Overview

"Unbranded" is a documentary film that chronicles an ambitious expedition across the American West. The film follows four young men and sixteen wild mustangs on a 3,000-mile journey from the Mexico border to Canada. The primary objective of this challenging trek is to raise awareness and inspire the adoption of the approximately 50,000 wild horses and burros currently held in government captivity.

The 3,000-Mile Journey

The core of "Unbranded" is the arduous and inspiring journey undertaken by Ben Masters, Jonny Fitzsimmons, Ben Thamer, and Thomas Glover. Starting from the Arizona-Mexico border, they traverse through some of the most challenging and scenic landscapes of the American West, including deserts, mountains, and vast plains, culminating their expedition at the Canadian border. This journey highlights the resilience of both the riders and the wild mustangs, showcasing the challenges of long-distance travel with untrained animals.
