General Tips

- Incorporate movement into your day. Even small amounts of activity can significantly improve your mood. Exercise or do yoga at home – there are many great videos on YouTube! Take breaks from your work to do simple stretches or walk for a few minutes. We recommend 30 to 60 minutes of movement a day, either all at once or spread out.
- Get enough sleep. A good night's sleep can help mood and stress levels. Talk to your doctor before taking sleep aids (such as melatonin, Benadryl, etc.). Try sleeping and waking up at the same time each day.
- Eat a balanced diet. This helps your body deal with tension and stress. Try a plant-based diet by increasing the amount of fresh fruits and vegetables you eat and avoid processed and sugary foods. Eat slowly, enjoy your food, and avoid distractions while eating.
- Get support from others. Tell people you trust about depression. It is usually better than being alone and keeping it a secret from your friends and family. Depression can cause us to isolate, and it is important to talk or spend time with others.
- Practice Gratitude. Appreciate & feel grateful for things you do have, as opposed to things you wish you had. Think of three things you are thankful for each day, even the little things! Writing down what you are grateful for in a journal can help.
- Practice Self-Compassion. Are you as kind to yourself as you are to your family, friends, and other people you care about? Self-care is not selfish. Try small things like reading a book, going for a walk, indulging in your favorite television show, or taking a bubble bath.
- Avoid drinking alcohol or using illegal drugs or medicines that have not been prescribed to you. Even though these may help you feel better in the moment, they may increase your depression overall.
- Practice mindfulness. Practicing mindfulness can help you manage your emotions. Mindfulness means being fully present in the moment and being aware of your thoughts and feelings. Practicing mindfulness can be as simple as remembering to take a deep breath before you answer the phone. There are many ways to be mindful — just find what works for you.
