TOOLS REQUIRED FOR DISASSEMBLY

1. Wire 2. Installation tools

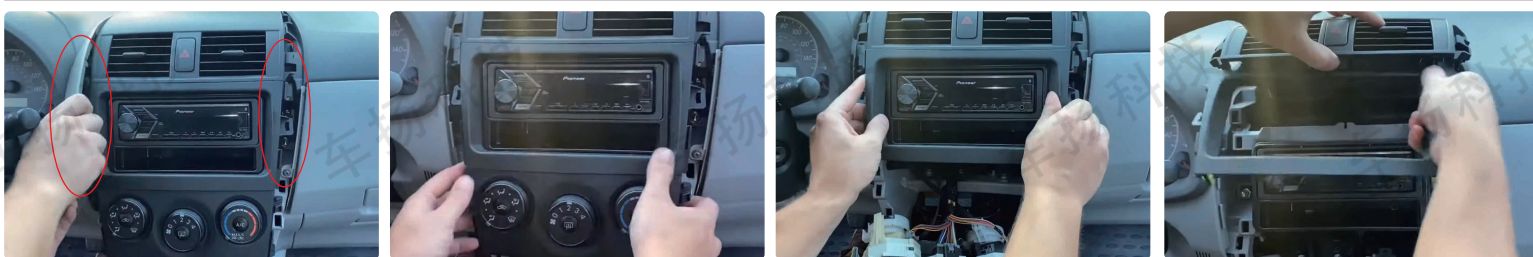

Disassembly:

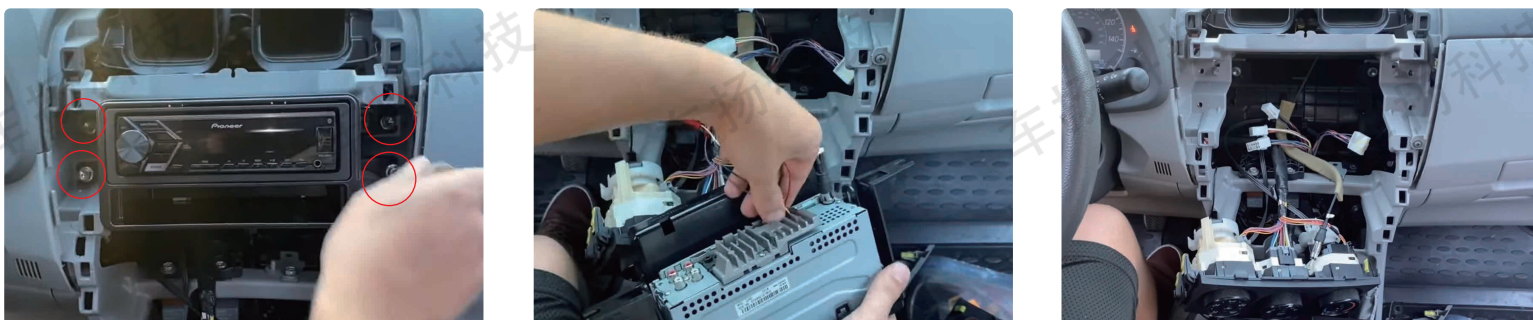

1. Use a pry bar to remove the decorative side trims of the air conditioning control panel, then unscrew the screws on both sides of the seatbelt warning panel. Pry open the storage compartment, remove the seatbelt warning panel, and disconnect the wires within it.

2. Pry open the decorative side trims on both sides of the radio, remove the air conditioning control panel, and then take out the outer frame of the radio along with the air conditioning vents.

3. Unscrew the four screws on both sides of the original radio, remove the radio, and unplug the wires connected to the original vehicle.

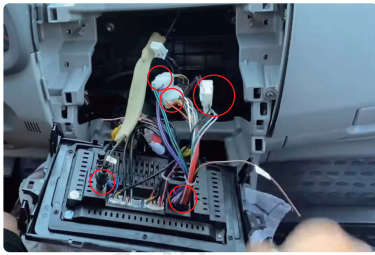

PROPOSE

Before starting the replacement job, you should prepare tools such as a plastic pry tool and a screwdriver, and make sure the car's power is cut off during the installation.

Installation

(If the wiring harness does not match, please contact customer service to request the correct wiring harness)

1. Connect the wires from the original vehicle to the new radio, then install the radio and the new frame into the designated position. Reattach the air conditioning vents and the air conditioning control panel to their original positions.

2. Connect the wires from the seatbelt warning panel to the original vehicle, reinstall it into the car, and place the storage compartment back into its corresponding position. Finally, tighten the screws on both sides of the seatbelt warning panel.

3. Reinstall the decorative side trims on both sides of the radio and the air conditioning control panel back into the original positions in the car. The installation of the new radio is now complete.
