Note

For this product, tubes and joints are connected using button clips. Button clips are already inserted inside tubes. When connecting, press the button clip and insert one tube into the joint. Forcing the tubes in might also work but you are risking damaging the Clip. Pay attention to the orientation of Part P.

Note

There are two pairs of holes on the vertical joint of Part C. When connecting Part 3Y to Part C, make sure that the Button Clip is pointing to the left and right, like what's shown on the left.

Note

Do not worry too much about the exact location of D3 and D6Y. Just make sure D6Y is completely covered by the two pairs of H.

Notice that on the two detailed illustrations above, screw L is not used. This is so that you have some wiggle room adjusting D3 and D6Y. Once you are happy with the result, use screw L to secure H.

Note

In the package you will find the poultry net. When attaching the net to the chicken run structure, do not pre-cut the net. Instead, roll the net along the tubes and cut it. The arrows on the illustrations indicate the flow of the net. Follow the arrows to roll and cut the net. Use zip-ties to fasten the net to the tubes. There will be overlaps between the nets.

Note

For the net placed at the back of the chicken run, we suggest rolling the net roll without measuring or precutting the net like last step. For the net placed in the front, it's easier to measure and cut the net, and then fasten the cutted net to the tubes.

Notice that the rectangular shape in the front has a greater length than the width of net roll, meaning if you roll the net vertically, the roll will not be wide enough to cover the rectangular area. In summary, please follow the arrows to roll and cut the net.
