This diagram illustrates the application of adhesive tape to the top edge of the cabinet. The main illustration shows a hand using a utility knife to cut the tape along the top edge of the cabinet. Two circular insets provide detailed views: the first inset shows the tape being applied to the top edge, and the second inset shows the tape being smoothed down. A third circular inset shows the tape being applied to the side edge of the cabinet. A fourth circular inset shows the tape being applied to the bottom edge of the cabinet. A fifth circular inset shows the tape being applied to the top edge of the cabinet, with a hand smoothing it down. A sixth circular inset shows the tape being applied to the side edge of the cabinet, with a hand smoothing it down. A seventh circular inset shows the tape being applied to the bottom edge of the cabinet, with a hand smoothing it down. A eighth circular inset shows the tape being applied to the top edge of the cabinet, with a hand smoothing it down. A ninth circular inset shows the tape being applied to the side edge of the cabinet, with a hand smoothing it down. A tenth circular inset shows the tape being applied to the bottom edge of the cabinet, with a hand smoothing it down.

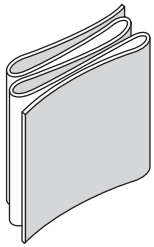

English

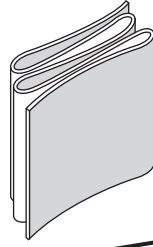

Fit a diffusion barrier on the underside of the worktop above white goods to provide extra protection against condensation and moisture.
